

Proquis Announces the Early Success of Recently Launched Allclear 2010

Proquis' new process management software - Allclear 2010 is receiving positive response from users worldwide. Allclear 2010 is a unique text-to-chart business process mapping and analysis tool.

Proquis, a global provider of compliance management, process mapping and analysis software, announced the early success of their process mapping and analysis program - Allclear 2010.

The need to reduce cost and improve business efficiency demands that every organization use process mapping and analysis tools like Allclear if they are to succeed in the tough market place. For the last decade, Allclear has been used by organizations to collaborate and communicate with teams, easily visualize business processes, leverage internal resources and improve information visibility.

Anthony Amundson, Proquis' Vice President, Global Sales & Marketing adds, "We are excited to offer this easy-to-use, new version of Allclear, which has already successfully enabled thousands of organizations to achieve process excellence. Allclear 2010 takes an already robust program to a new level and culminates years of research, customer feedback and dedicated product development into this tool. Allclear 2010 retains its unique text-to-chart approach for creation of flowcharts and additionally offers easy navigation and usability functions."

Allclear 2010 introduces new features such as the Microsoft Office style interface, context-sensitive ribbons and tab control to swap between editor, data and analyzer views. With Allclear, you can edit and improve complex multi-layered diagrams in minutes!

The new capabilities combined with existing Allclear functionalities are fast gaining acceptance by business professionals in many organizations. Allclear's features offer an ability to create, edit, analyze and publish processes in a fast and reliable fashion. Allclear 2010 process maps can be freely shared with non-Allclear users in the organization through the Clear Viewer application. Clear Viewer can be easily downloaded from the Proquis website.

Allclear 2010 is available in three product editions and offers a range of licensing options including business and educational pricing. Please visit our website at www.proquis.com to purchase licenses of Allclear software or to download a trial version.
